

Hill, James J.-
Art Gallery

September 25, 1898.

Hill's "home on Summit Avenue is regarded as the finest residence in this country. It has a magnificent conservatory, but its crowning feature is its art gallery, where there is to be seen the best and largest collection found outside of Europe. It is easy to gain the entree to this model art gallery of an American private palace. It extends 200 feet, from one end to the other of the residence. It is finished in oak with a large organ at one end and a great fireplace at the other, over which hangs Ribot's "Christ Taken from the Cross."

On the walls are hung the best in modern art."

From New York Journal, Sunday, September 25, 1898.

Filed in General Correspondence under this date.