

Schiff, Jacob

April 22, 1896

Jacob Schiff to J. J. Hill.

Schiff thinks "it would be well" if his son Mortimer[?]remained with Mr. Farrington until the end of May in order, both to make himself useful during this busy season, & also to get the varied experience which he can, no doubt, acquire during the opening of navigation. If he could then come under your direct supervision, in your own private office, during June and July to finish up as you expressed it, I am sure he will come back with instructions and acquisitions, which will be of the greatest value to him in his future Y r."

General correspondence by date