Sharples, James - Portraits

May 3, 1883 .

Hill to Joseph E. Wheelock, St. Paul

Re the Washington portraits. They should be in a "well established library, where they could receive the great care they deserve and which their present condition shows they have had during the long time they have remained in the family of their present owners....I am glad to know that these excellent portraits of the Great Washington are so well appreciated." Tell Major Walter to "have the other two portraits finished at his leisure and send them to me. I will pay him what he thinks they are worth."
