

Stone Arch Bridge

December 5, 1911

T. B. Walker to Hill

"The people here [Minneapolis] are fiercely opposed to the Government building the post office, facing Third Avenue South, and widening that avenue at a heavy bill of expense, to be paid for principally by the tax payers who are only to be discommoded and damaged by its being located in that place and particularly also as part of the plan to build a very expensive long bridge with high, heavy piers on the shelf of rock that underlies the Falls, and which you will remember was not considered safe for you to build a bridge across and safe for you to build your bridge across and that you had to go be [REDACTED] and build a far more expensive curved arch bridge."
