

United States - Government and Politics.

July 20, 1896.

Jacob Schiff to Hill.

Believes there will be much uncertainty in the country until the November election. By that time, affairs throughout the country will be such that Bryan and Sewell will be defeated and McKinley overwhelmingly elected and "the gold cure against the prevailing silver drunkenness and madness shall prove lasting."

General Correspondence