The agents kept in touch with the parolees through regular correspondence and visits. These records document both the various state agents and their assistants and include cash books (1895-1914), monthly circular letters to all parolees (1898-1934), a detailed record of parolees activities and behavior (1895-1909), and monthly reports of the agent's daily activities (1904-1949).
