About the James J. Hill House

The James J. Hill House is a historic house museum, owned and operated by the Minnesota Historical Society. Completed in 1891 for the Great Northern Railway Empire Builder and his family, it is the largest home on Summit Avenue and was designated a National Historic Landmark in 1961. Guided tours are offered year round, serving 45,000 visitors annually. The Hill House Art Gallery features changing exhibits of Minnesota art and artists. Special programs include chamber concerts, student workshops, dramatic programs, lectures, and walking tours of the Summit Avenue neighborhood. The site provides office space for the Minnesota Historical Society and is available to outside organizations to host meetings, conferences, classes, luncheons, dinners, and receptions.

Join Us

As part of the Minnesota Historical Society, the Friends of the James J. Hill House is a membership organization committed to preserving the Hill House and keeping it open to the public as a cultural and educational treasure. Recognizing the site's architectural significance—and James

J. Hill's impact on the transportation and economic history of the United States—individuals and corporations have come together to provide funding for conservation and restoration projects, special programs, audience development, and general site operations. Please join us in ensuring that this National Historic Landmark is protected and accessible for future generations.
